NOTES:

1) During at least part of World War I, Nathan worked at Budd's Metal factory. This steel-working company built trolley cars and railroad trains in peacetime, but converted to war production during the Great War.

2) After the World War II, Nathan discovered the carnival business. As a concessionaire at county and state fairs, he sold cotton candy and snow balls. Although hle only went to about ten fairs each year, he loved the life and always regretted not having found the trade earlier.
